

A DAINY NEGLIGEE

By LA RACONTEUSE.

No really dainty woman can be without a negligee, and none need be without one. A fascinating combination of peach colored satin and cream lace is shown in the one illustrated, the lace forming a loose flowing jacket. A crushed satin girdle confines the fullness of the foundation at the waistline and loops gracefully in front. A round cording finishes the edge of the hem.

Whose Hands Are These?

Surely you have seen these very hands before! Come to think of it—wasn't it only the other day?

Yes, her hands were beautiful just a few years ago—"the prettiest hands in El Paso," they used to say.

And now—they're wrinkled, and seamed, and red—poor girl!

And it need not have been so—oh, no, indeed. But she's one of these women who think they must wash the finer things themselves—and her husband "likes her ironing better than that laundry finish"—oh, yes, and she suffers!

The sending of all the family wash to the El Paso Laundry is ECONOMY. Let us call and show you how it figures out.
